WHAT WILL NCRA CERTIFICATION DO FOR YOU?

In an increasingly competitive marketplace, it's harder than ever to impress your clients and employers. In this environment, there are only so many ways for you to differentiate yourself from other available options – whether that's fellow reporters seeking the same opportunities or alternative technologies that might be under consideration.

Now more than ever, it's critical that all stenographic reporters take the next step. Now more than ever, it's crucial that you diversify your skills and add new services to your repertoire. Now more than ever, it's time for you to add an NCRA certification to your list of career accomplishments.

Demonstrate Your Commitment, Build Credibility

It's not enough to tell your clients and employer that you've got the skills. You must show them. Whether you're looking for the baseline credibility provided by the RPR credential, the advanced recognition you earn through the RMR and RDR credentials, or the acknowledgment of expertise within specialty areas like broadcast captioning, CART, or legal video, NCRA has a certification program that will get you to that next step.

Build & Showcase Your Skills

Being part of the stenographic court reporting profession means continually working to advance your skills. Success requires constantly putting yourself to the test to ensure you are on the cutting edge. Whether it's learning a new technology, branching out to new specialty areas, or simply conquering that advanced certification, it's time for you to achieve and then to showcase that achievement.

Open the Doors of Opportunity; Enhance Your Career

Opportunity does not come knocking...you have to go find it. And it's amazing how much easier it is to find opportunity when you have a new credential behind your name. Along with the skills and training that make you a better reporter, a new credential creates a "buzz" about you. That buzz brings recognition. And that recognition brings opportunity.

Realtime - It's not Just the Gold Standard, It's the Bottom Line

As study after study continues to point out, realtime is no longer just a gold standard, it's the absolute key point of differentiation between stenographic court reporters and alternatives at the disposal of your clients and employers. So many of the services that reporters have to offer rely on realtime capability to make them happen. You've put it off long enough. It's time for you to write realtime. It's time for you to train for and sit for the Certified Realtime Reporter (CRR) exam. Not next year...right now.

Career Advice from Employers

In a recent survey, NCRA prompted firm owners with this question: What characteristics do you look for in hiring court reporters? Throughout this handbook, we've provided some of that advice, which comes to you directly from employers of court reporters.

What Employers Are Looking For

"Be enthusiastic about your career and technology. Continue your growth with certifications. Have an immaculate resume. Be 'hungry' to work."

ANNOUNCING EXPEDITED DELIVERY OF TEST RESULTS

The new change not only gives candidates same day access to preliminary results online, but also provides access to graded practice tests, as well as to additional online practice materials.

Beginning with the May 5, 2012 exam, NCRA will move to expedited results for the RPR, RMR, CRR, CBC, and CCP skills tests, which will allow most candidates to receive same-day preliminary results, learning almost immediately whether they have passed. Previously, candidates had to wait on pins and needles for up to six weeks for the same feedback.

NCRA holds its certifications to nationally recognized best practices for test development, administration, and security, while continually striving to meet the needs of reporters seeking to enhance their knowledge and skills. In response to member requests to expand access to certification, and to further enable all reporters to take the necessary steps to become certified, NCRA has partnered with myRealtimeCoach developers, to offer expedited results. myRealtimeCoach personnel have deep experience with all aspects of online learning and testing.

While NCRA had offered expedited results for its written knowledge tests for a number of years through Pearson VUE examination sites, such was not the case for skills tests, which, as practical tests, did not as readily adapt to an electronic environment.

But with the evolution of technology and NCRA's new arrangement with myRealtimeCoach, that has changed.

The online system for receiving candidate transcripts from testing sites, evaluating them, and distributing results electronically has additional benefits:

- The opportunity for all candidates enrolled in an exam to take an online, graded practice test prior to the real thing with instant access to results, displaying exactly where mistakes are being made,
- A more relaxed testing environment in which each individual listens to exam material over personal head phones rather than through a public address system, plus fewer "jitters" because the exam is delivered in the same environment in which candidates practice,
- Overall, a paperless system that brings more consistency and efficiency to test administration across all exam sites, and
- Enhanced exam security through less reliance on surface delivery of materials along with secure logins for everyone associated with the testing and grading processes.

How will the expedited results work?

From the candidates' perspective, most elements of the skills exam process will remain the same. Candidates will still register for a locally-sponsored test site, and an NCRA chief examiner will oversee the testing.

What makes the new arrangement through myRealtimeCoach so exciting is that it will compel candidates to take part in practice tests online before sitting for the actual exam. Well in advance of test day, candidates will log in to the secure online interface to set up their computer, CAT software, and Internet settings, and to test system set-up. They also will be able to save those settings. Candidates will then take a practice test and receive a score and feedback, just like on test day. myRealtimeCoach users will have the added benefit of experience with a similar process, and myRealtimeCoach personnel will provide customer care to any candidate with difficulty prior to the exam.

On test day, candidates will arrive at the test site, log in to the secure interface, set up and test their system, and be ready to take the exam, exactly as they did at home. Simple steps done in advance will reduce the likelihood of errors on test day, helping to ease the "test anxiety" some candidates experience on test day. Those who assist in administering NCRA certification exams, known as "chief examiners," also will benefit because candidates walk in knowing what to expect by having successfully completed the process in advance.

After an exam file is uploaded, candidates will receive preliminary feedback regarding test performance the same day, and it is NCRA's expectation to further reduce that amount of time in upcoming test cycles. Once tests are reviewed by an NCRA-qualified grader, the final test result is confirmed.

NCRA is pleased to announce this important step for its certification and testing program. Please visit www.ncra.org/testing for further certification and testing updates, or www.myrealtimecoach.com for certification prep. Questions or comments may be directed to the Department of Certification and Testing at testing@ncra.org.
